Joe Palmer was a larger-than-life folk figure.

After his death, the stories of his extraordinary strength, epic adventures, and impossible heroism grew. Then they faded and disappeared, leaving only a mountain and a cave with his name.

Joe's real story involves the entangled histories of land, ambition, violence, survival, and community. It provides an opportunity to consider the complex forces that have shaped us.

Join us as an historical archaeologist resurrects both Joe's story and ours.

This event is FREE and open to all.

Please note that this presentation includes discussion of violent historic events.
